Jayne,

I am going to wait until we host the San Diego meeting before I sent out the letter. EPA is actually set up to provide mediation services for parties involved in environmental disputes. I just became aware of the program and will be getting a briefing next week. From what I know I will most likely reach out to litigants and make available this service. I think I've established enough credibility with all the parties in the litigation that everyone would trust EPA serving in this role. From what I've been told the service would be offered through headquarters. In any event I am not going to send any letters out until after the June meetings.

Best regards,

Mike,

On Tuesday you discussed the option of sending a letter from EPA to the litigants making some proposals for moving forward. Are you still considering sending that letter or any letter?
